

Prevention of Sleeping Sickness in Horses

Equine Encephalomyelitis or sleeping sickness in horses is one of the most serious horse diseases that has ever appeared in western Canada. The Province of Alberta was fortunate in escaping this disease until the summer of 1938, although outbreaks had occurred in Manitoba and Saskatchewan in previous years and had assumed serious proportions during 1937 and 1938. Alberta has, therefore, the benefit of the experience gained in combating the disease in Manitoba and Saskatchewan.

Should the disease occur in Alberta this year and follow the course that it has taken elsewhere, we may expect it to be of a more virulent form and more wide spread than it was during the past season when it occurred in more or less restricted areas. For these reasons, it is essential that farmers and horsemen acquire all the information they can regarding the preventive measures that may be taken.

Vaccination has been found to be the most effective method of control. Experiments conducted in Canada and the United States uphold this statement. The administration of vaccine, however, is a preventive, not a cure, and vaccination to be effective must be done BEFORE the disease is contracted.

The first entirely satisfactory vaccine was developed for use on a large scale in 1938. It is known as "Chick" vaccine and large quantities of it are now available in the prairie provinces under a co-operative arrangement made between the governments of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, and the manufacturers—the Lederle Laboratories in New York, and Cutters Laboratory in Berkeley, California.

Therefore, there is at our disposal a positive means of preventing an outbreak of this disease on a large scale. The price of the vaccine, including the cost of administration, will not exceed one dollar per horse. Therefore, it ought to be possible for the majority of the farmers in Alberta to vaccinate most of their horses. Vaccine properly administered assures protection for a period of six months.

PROTECT YOUR HORSES

FROM

EQUINE ENCEPHALOMYELITIS

(SLEEPING SICKNESS IN HORSES)

Experts agree that the outbreak of this disease is likely to reach its peak in Alberta this summer.

VACCINATION

is the only recommended preventive treatment.

PROCEDURE

1. Vaccinate all horses with "Chick" vaccine during the month of April.
2. Two doses of vaccine are required, given from seven to fourteen days apart.
3. Vaccine is available at drug stores, municipal offices and from qualified veterinarians. Cost for both doses—75c.
4. A qualified veterinarian, or if one is not available, some other authorized person should be obtained to administer the vaccine.
5. Farmers wishing to do so may vaccinate their own horses.

["Chick" vaccine properly administered will produce immunity for six months.]

Warning!

Vaccine is effective only when given prior to outbreak of the disease.

Warble Fly Control

A community effort for the control of warble flies is emphasized in a circular to be published immediately by the Department of Agriculture.

Because warble flies do not migrate for any considerable distance, concerted effort on the part of everyone within a given area will effect almost complete eradication of this pest.

The damage done by this warble fly in Canada is estimated at between seven and fourteen million dollars annually. The insects not only spoils hides, but on account of its terrifying effect on cattle, it seriously reduces the yield of milk from dairy cows and retards the gains of beef cattle.

The grubs of the warble fly can be attacked by man only during the period of their development when they are imbedded in the backs of the cattle. At this time the application of derris root powder or a compound of it, either as a powder or a wash has been most effective. The cost of treatment is remarkably low and farmers are amply repaid for undertaking control measures in this way.

It is recommended that the first treatment should be made when the lumps caused by the grubs become conspicuous on the backs of the animals, and that second and third treatments should follow at twenty-eight day intervals.

Further information on the control of warble flies may be secured from your nearest district agriculturist, or you may write direct to the Department of Agriculture, Edmonton.

Round About Town

SEEN BY US

Our pretty telephone operator looks rather blue these days. We don't blame her—it's no joke when the B. F. leaves town.

We saw a certain high school couple walking home together one day last week. It's a good excuse to say that they both live on the same avenue. But we know that it was more than a mere coincidence.

We are sure that everyone is going to miss the handsome young man who boarded the "Westbound" last Friday. The fair sex, in particular, are going to miss him greatly.

...
What's wrong at the hotel and the house next to it, these days? One would think there had been a funeral. Cheer up girls—don't you know that absence makes the heart grow fonder?

It seems as if the town loses all power of holding the lads here, when spring comes. It's hard on some of the girls who have to stay behind. We pity poor Miss X, of R. R. Avenue—but remember letters aren't so expensive.

It's nice to see the young couples out enjoying a walk on Sunday afternoon. It reminds us of the days of our youth—and we were just as silly as the worst of them.

CHAPTER VI.—Continued

A man in the company's uniform came up to her, touching his cap. "Beg pardon! Is there anything we can do for you? Would you like a taxi? I mean, where are you going?"

"To San Jose; to Danavale." She turned round then, coming out of her abstraction, painfully aware, suddenly, of the curious crowd. Her face flamed. She gathered up the blanket and shook it and tried to wrap it around her.

"We haven't another plane tonight."

"I must telephone my father," Sarah Lynn said. "Where?"

"The bride ran after her and caught hold of her arm. 'Say, listen, sister,' she said in a high, sweet voice, 'are you in a jam?'"

"I'm quite all right," Sarah Lynn said stiffly.

"Well, is that nice? Throwing you out like a sack of mail! Is that a good old Norse custom?"

"I want to telephone—"

"Here—I'll show you!" She picked up her glistering train.

Sarah Lynn followed her. "Is this Fresno?"

"Well, for Pete's sake! Didn't you know where you were landing? Yes, this is Fresno, and here's your booth. I'll wait for you."

"Thank you," Sarah Lynn said coldly. "It's not necessary."

She looked fully at her for the first time and took in the details of white satin and flimsy veil and orange blossoms. "I mustn't keep you from—"

"Oh, that's all right!" she said easily. "It's just one of my wedding! Married in Hollywood and flying to Frisco and set the ship down to say hello to a bunch of nit-wits. Go ahead and telephone your folks."

The young man had followed them and he said something to her in a low tone. She nodded. "Don't shut the door, dearie—you'll smother in that box. I'll stand right here."

The youth lit a cigarette and strolled away, but kept within glancing distance.

"I want Danavale 3704. Yes. It's a suburb of San Jose. I want to speak to Mr. Dana—Mr. Edwin Lynn Dana."

There was at once panic and reassurance in the sound of her father's voice, thick, drowsy, amazed. "It's Sarah Lynn. I'm at Fresno, Fresno, Fresno. Why? I flew down. Flee! Flee! With Gunnar Thorwald? What? I don't know where Duncan is. Oh, Dad, please—I'll explain everything when I see you. How can I get home? I haven't any money."

"She was listening, listening. 'Yes, at the Fresno airport. All right. I wait here? What? All right. Yes; the California hotel and ask for Mr. Pond. How soon can you get here?—Tell Mother not to worry, please! I'm perfectly all right. Yes—"

"I understand—Mr. Pond, California hotel. Her voice, thin, strained, hoarse, warmed suddenly. "Oh, Dad, it was glorious—glorious!—yes. Good-by."

The young man came close to her, speaking with controlled excitement. "You're Miss Dana? From Danavale? I used to work on the newspaper in San Jose. You flew down with Gunnar Thorwald? Well, of course you did," he grinned, "but what I mean is, weren't you going all the way to Glendale with him?"

"No," Sarah Lynn said briefly, aware now of the avid curiosity in his gimlet gaze.

"Isn't it a fact he vowed he'd never take a woman up in his ship?"

"Yes."

"And then he kidnaps you in a blanket and—"

"He did not," she defended him hotly. "It wasn't his fault—I mean, he didn't intend—I stopped, confused."

"Why did he dump you out like that? Didn't you ask him to set you down at Fresno? But you didn't know it was Fresno, did you? I guess maybe it was a pretty wild party, wasn't it? Do you mind telling me just how—"

The bride put a protective arm about the forlorn, thin figure. "Lay off the interview, Beanie! Isn't it a girl's privilege to get out and walk home when she wants to? Probably the Great Dane got a little too primitive and she—"

"It wasn't his fault! I told you it wasn't his fault!" She walked away from them, her blanket spreading out behind her like a train, and spoke to the uniformed attendant.

"I want a taxi, please."

"Wait!" the bride ran after her. "There's a flock of cars here. I'll have somebody drive you. Look—I'll come with you myself!"

"Please don't trouble," Sarah Lynn was rigid. "I want a taxi, please."

"No trouble, lambie! Hi, Larry!" she hailed the groom. "Listen,

"The instant they were out of hearing the youth flung himself upon the telephone and shouted a number.

"Hello! Nick? Say, later, just pin the 'of' cars back and listen! What a story! Ready? Gunnar Thorwald, Norwegian ace, who has just flown the Atlantic, and who had taken a vow never to fly a woman in his ship, the Horned dove, at Fresno, at 2:45 a.m. and unceremoniously landed Miss Sarah Dana, of the famous Danavale colony, exclusive suburb—he drew a reviving breath and went on—'of San Jose, and I got a picture that's a honey—the gal in a formal and a blanket—blanket, yeah, b-l-a-n-k-e-t, standing beside Kitty Medall, Wild Woman of the Air, Hollywood's stunt-flyingest fool and her nth bridegroom!"

The big and beautiful lobby of the Hotel Californian was dimly lit and drowsy, the exquisite Regency cocktail room was asleep, but the man behind the desk was wide-awake and behind.

"Why, hello, Miss Medall!" Then he laughed. "Beg pardon! I mean, Mrs. Van Dalton!"

"Old stuff, big boy. Don't you ever read the papers? Sure, I'm an older bride. I checked the groom out at the field while I brought you a customer. This is Miss Dana, from up north. She was flying to Los and changed her mind, and she wants to stay till her folks come for her. Make her comfortable, will you."

"Gladly!" His puzzled gaze went over her bridal finery to Sarah Lynn's blanket. "Will you register, Miss Dana?" A buzzer sounded behind him and he turned to answer the telephone. "Yes, Mr. Pond?—Just a minute, please. Yes, yes, Mr. Pond. He turned back to them.

"Miss Dana, your father telephoned. Mr. and Mrs. Pond will be right down. Won't you have a chair?"

"Then everything's jake, and here goes the bride!" She waved aside Sarah Lynn's stammered thanks with a heavily jeweled, well-decorated hand which was slightly grimy. "You tell your Big Swede I don't like his fireman's hat! Tell him all the regulars over here wear bouclé caps."

"She gave her a comradely hug. 'Don't let it get you down, dearie! By!' She spread out her satin train, dropped her eyes with maidenly reserve, folded her hands and went out of the lobby with slow and timid steps, balancing uncertainly on the balls of her feet at every pace, humming tenderly—

"Here comes the bride—"

The hotel man and his wife came hurrying down immediately, kind, concerned. Mr. Pond understood perfectly, but his father had explained the situation and asked them to make her at home until he arrived: it was a privilege to be of some slight service to her father's daughter.

Sarah Lynn felt that Mrs. Pond understood even more perfectly. She was equally hospitable, but her shrewd, bright eyes were evaluating the frowsy hair, the bedraggled dress, the blanket. "I'll make you a cup of chocolate, and you must have a good hot tub."

"And a sound sleep," her husband added. "Your father can't make it under four hours, so you must just relax and be comfortable."

Danavale rang and rocked with Sarah Lynn's exploit. Mary Dana Webster went at once to the parents and stated her firm conviction that the child had been drugged, but Arline said to their questionings like quicksilver.

The nonagenarian summoned Sarah Lynn. "Your Great-Gramma wants you should come over, quick's ever you can get here," the fat tones of Emma Waters, the maid, stated over the telephone.

The girl set out once the grey-hound flashing on ahead. Lightning was a solace in the first very vocal days of Danavale's disapproval.

The matriarch was chirping and cackling with excitement and approval. "Well, I declare, Sairy Lynn, if you didn't up! out and snare! I did! Crawled into the flyin' machine and hid just like I did in the covered wagon! Don't surprise me a minute! Proud of you. And I'd admire to meet your beau sometime. All right, him over to see me, Sarah Lynn."

Her great-granddaughter cringed. "Great-granny, he isn't at all! He despises me. You don't understand. He is furious because—"

"Oh, well, now, don't you fret!" the ancestress comforted her. "Your Great-gramma was kind of like that, first off. Some are. Thought they'd ought of sent me back and was real harsh in his talk, but land—he come round in no time. You'll see!"

Sarah Lynn went upstairs where her Cousin Sairy Ann was having tea with her Uncle Lynn. They were the most satisfactory of all her adherents.

"After all, it was a gorgeous adventure," the travelling clanswoman said. "At your age I'd have adored it."

"Did he take our picture?"

angel; I'm driving this child to the hotel. Back in a jiff. She flung her long white gloved arms about him and gave him a painstaking cinema kiss. "No, of course I won't run out on you, beautiful! You just stay out here and play with your wooden soldiers and the first thing you know it'll be Christmas morning!"

The young man spoke to her in a low voice. "Hold everything for a sec', will you, Kit? I want to get the two of you together, with your train and her blanket. Boy, is this a vow or is this a vow?"

He beckoned to a man with a camera who came swiftly forward. "All right, him over to see me, Sarah Lynn."

The bride arranged her veil and settled the little lace cap, and thrust her arm through Sarah Lynn's. "Come along, babe! Well, will you look who's here!"

Sarah Lynn glanced up. There was a soft explosion, a dazzling flash.

"Slack!" the reporter said gleefully. "It's a knockout!"

"Oh!" Sarah Lynn cried out in panic. "Did he take our picture? He mustn't! My mother would be—"

"Don't you worry! I know how his stuff turns out—we might as well be a couple Native Belles of Mo-zambique village. Here we are, hon!"

She shepherded Sarah Lynn to a car garlanded with white streamers. "California hotel, Tommy, my lad, and let 'er step!"

"I did," Sarah Lynn said quickly. "I do. Only—the way it happened—"

Lynn Dana said, "I've just remembered a chap I know rather well, an airman, Conrad Jordan. He's undoubtedly met this Gunnar lad, or he will, and I intend to see, Sarah Lynn, that he gets the truth."

She flushed hotly. "Oh, that's good of you, Uncle Lynn, but you mustn't bother. It wouldn't make a bit of difference to me. I mean, he has such contempt for—"

"When you come abroad with me we'll do a lot of flying, Sarah Lynn," the older woman said. "I like it enormously. The glamour never goes out of it for me."

They were casual, comfortable; Sarah Lynn stayed on and on, listening while they talked to each other. She walked home in the dusk with her greyhound pacing demurely beside her.

She found the old governors reading ardently, with four library books opened about her.

"I'm just refreshing my mind a bit on Norse history and legend, my dear," she greeted her college, lifting pale, profound eyes. "I was rather rusty, so to speak. Quite marvelous people, the Norsemen. The Vikings, voyaging all about Europe, conquering, learning, amazing. Women and children went along to the wars, you know. Valiant, but hard, they were. Listen to this bit!"—she lifted a worn volume of history—

"The early Norseman had a keen mind, but his heart was as much steel as his sword; he loved battle and stormy seas; he admired the hero, the clever, the strong; for the old and feeble he had no interest, for the suffering no sympathy; the weak he despised."

"Yes," said Sarah Lynn. "I know."

Were Seeking Oil

But Scientists Discovered River Of Hot Water In Tasmania

A river of hot water has been discovered in the North-East of Tasmania by a party of scientists from the Tasmanian University, who set out to seek or oil deposits in the Scamander River.

They disproved the old theory but came across a thermal area extending over a quarter of a mile in the river.

About 250,000 gallons of hot water were found with temperatures which ranged 95 degrees at the warmest spot.

The phenomenon is believed to be caused either by the fact that the rocks are hot beneath the bed of the river or by the presence near by of a subterranean river. "The People's Magazine."

Best Talker, Worst Flyer

Orville Wright was reproached for not taking up the challenge of the Smithsonian Institution that was Langley, not the Wrights, who was the first to fly.

"The trouble with you, Orville," said a friend, "is that you are too taciturn. You don't assert yourself enough. You should press agentize more."

"My dear friend," Orville Wright answered, "the best talker and the worst flyer among the birds is the parrot."

Always Agreeable

Lord Charles Bessborough tells in his memoirs the story of an old Irish gamekeeper who always agreed with everything that was said to him.

Meeting the old man one day when the wind was blowing a gale, Lord Charles said to him: "It's a fine, calm day to-day."

"You may well say that, Lord Charles," replied the gamekeeper with hearty acquiescence, "but what the little wind there is is terrible strong."

Was Clever Financier

Widow Of New York Publisher Carried Hugo Sims In Paper Bags

Strange tale of Manhattan folklore and legend lies behind a simple notation which appeared on a calendar in the Court of Surrogate Judge James Foley—a notation on the contest over distribution of $877,000.

Seven years ago, Mrs. Ida Wood, the "little widow of Herald Square," died at the Herald Square Hotel, New York, where she lived a recluse in the midst of a great city. She was a little, wizened woman, with a genius for finance and a penchant for carrying fabulous sums in paper bags hidden in the folds of her prim skirt.

Her hoarded fortune was found in her apartment after she died. Her will named two beneficiaries who had died before she died.

Claimants to her wealth immediately appeared in all parts of the globe. There were 1,107 of them originally, but hearings and investigations have narrowed the field down to 22 individuals for these estates.

Mrs. Wood, the widow of Benjamin Wood, publisher of the old New York Daily News, was a reigning figure in the colorful social life of the 90's. After the death of her husband in 1900, she forsook the brilliant life she had always led and decided to carry on her husband's business enterprises.

With the acumen of a Wall Street genius, she preserved the fortune left to her and gradually added more and more.

The panic of 1907 left her distrustful of banks. She had disposed of many of her holdings before the crash came and she avoided serious loss, but she retired from the business world, just as she had retired from the social sphere some years before.

Few persons saw or heard of Mrs. Wood for many years. In 1931 it was discovered she was living at the Herald Square Hotel and had not stirred from her apartment in two years. She lived there alone surrounded by souvenirs and reminders of her past and happier days.

A court declared her incompetent in 1931. A nephew, Otis F. Wood, named to care for her, revealed she had carried $900,000 in $1,000 bills concealed in paper bags in the folds of her skirt for many years. She was said to have made a trip through Africa with $700,000 in a brown paper bag tied night and day to her wrist.

Scholarship Award

Canadian Federation Of University Women Make Awards To Westerners

Dr. Muriel Roscoe of Acadia University, convener of the scholarship committee of the Canadian Federation of University Women, announced Miss Phyllis Brewster of Vancouver and Miss Dorothy Lefebvre of Canora, Sask., had been awarded the federation's 1939 scholarships.

Miss Brewster is the winner of the $1,250 travelling scholarship open to women graduates of Canadian universities.

The $700 junior scholarship won by Miss Lefebvre, at present an instructor under the Dominion-provincial youth training program in Saskatchewan, will enable her to carry on graduate work in household science at Iowa state college.

Miss Lefebvre had a brilliant undergraduate record at the University of Saskatchewan in the field of household science and upon graduation in 1938 won the Governor-General's health services to the most distinguished graduate of the year.

Members of the scholarship committee are Dr. Roscoe, Mrs. W. L. Grant, warden of the Royal Victoria college, Dr. Helen I. Battle, University of Western Ontario; Dr. Cecilia Kriger, University of Toronto; Dr. Jean E. Murray, University of Saskatchewan, and Dr. Dorothy Blakey, University of British Columbia.

Canada And Argentina

Argentina and Uruguay imported about 300,000 bushels of certified seed potatoes from Canada during the 1938-39 season, as compared with 1,186,784 bushels during the corresponding season of 1937-38.

During the 1938-39 season, up to the present, Canada exported 23,336 boxes of apples to Argentina, as against 14,360 boxes during the 1937-38 season.

Light On Controversy

Contents Of Letters Between British And Arabs In 1915 Revealed

Light has been thrown on the 24-year-old controversy between the British Government and the Arabs over the promises alleged to have been made to the Arabs when Britain's Lawrence of Arabia was encouraging them to revolt against the Turks during the World War.

The publication in English of letters which passed between the British and the Arabs in 1915 has now revealed their contents. They were written in Arabic, but the Arabs, in connection with the deeded conference with the Jews and the British Government in London, had insisted that the letters be translated and published.

The letters were exchanged by Sherif Hussein of Mecca and Sir Henry McMahon, First High Commissioner to Egypt.

The first letter, from the Sherif, invited Britain "to acknowledge the independence of Arab countries" in the Arabian peninsula and mentioned the Mediterranean as the western boundary of that area.

Successive British Governments have maintained that Palestine was not included in the area. No official British view has been stated since publication of the correspondence but it was believed both sides still held their original conflicting views.

Much of the difficulty about these letters comes in the fact that the originals were in Arabic and were difficult to translate. Besides, Palestine was not mentioned, as it did not exist under that name at the time of the Anglo-Arab negotiations. At that time, the Holy Land was divided into administrative units known as sanjaks.

The letters threw little new light on the dispute as to whether McMahon included Palestine in his bargain with the Arabs, but they confirmed the belief that the late "Lawrence of Arabia," long pictured as a romantic hero of the desert, was a clever British paymaster and instigator among the Arabs.

Perhaps the most interesting aspects of the McMahon letters is their frankness about the correspondence between the British and the Arabs. The letters give the impression that Hussein had only to ask, and he received. The correspondence is also remarkable for the unctuous quality of the salutations and greetings which passed between two "traders."

Relations Are Friendly

The London Daily Express says good feeling abounds between Great Britain and the Free State. Trade between them has reached a high figure. The relations between the two people are on a first-rate basis. Bombs will not divide them. There will be no recriminations. On the contrary, the two nations will join together to use all their resources to crush out this ugly viper.

CHANGE OF LIFE

WOMEN in mid-life who experience nervousness, "heat flashes," headache, backache or headaches associated with functional disturbances, will find Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription helpful. Mrs. Samuel Corbett, 131 Parliament St., Toronto, Ont., writes: "I was 40 years of age when I began to feel 'hot' and nervous. I could hardly get to sleep at night. I had become pale and thin. From the very first I began to take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. I began to pick up. I continued using it and it actually changed my life. I am now 45 years of age and I feel as well as I did when I was 20."

Guaranteed Wheat Price Sought By Line Elevators

Support Demands Of Bracken Committee For Assistance To Farmers

The following statement was issued by Charles E. Haylos, President of the North West Grain Dealers' Association:

"Line Country Elevator Companies are actively supporting the demands of the Western Committee on Markets and Agricultural Readjustment" for:

- The continuation of a Wheat Board for 1939-40.
- The setting of a guaranteed price for wheat of at least 80 cents for One Northern, bas is Fort William.
- The granting of subsidy assistance to coars grains farmers and to farmers who may be affected by drought or other forms of crop failure.

"Three representatives of Line Country Elevators were members of the delegation headed by Premier Bracken, which presented an extensive brief dealing with the Western Grain situation to the Dominion Cabinet.

"The North-West Grain Dealers' Association, whose membership is composed of Line Country Elevator Companies, has two representatives on the permanent Western Committee set up by Premier Bracken to study West conditions and is lending all possible assistance in an effort to find a solution for the serious problems which face Western Agriculture."

Special Meeting Of Friendly Circle

A special meeting of the Friendly circle was held on Wednesday evening at the home of Mrs. Lloyd Robinson. Thirteen members were present.

The Esler Hospital at Cereal, having put in a request for one of the "iron lungs" donated by the English millionaire Lord Nuffield, to any hospital making application for one, the Circle of Chinook decided to do something, in common with the other units of the Hospital to get up money to pay the freight of the machine to Cereal.

They decided to put on a card party and dance in the near future for this purpose and committees were appointed to look after the matter. Mr. L. Robinson is chairman of the Hospital Board.

ANNOUNCEMENT

The above card party and dance will be held in the Chinook Hotel on Wednesday, April 5th, cards to start at 8 o'clock sharp.

The Friendly Circle hopes that every one, young and old, will heartily respond to this opportunity to help in this very worthy cause. Price of admission, 35 cents which includes cards and dancing.

They All Advertise

A hen is not supposed to have Much common sense of tact, Yet every time she lays an egg She cackles forth the fact.

A rooster hasn't got a lot Of intellect to show, But none the less most roosters have Enough good sense to crow.

The mule, the most despised of beasts,

Has a persistent way Of letting folks know he's around By his insistent bray.

The busy little bees they buzz, Bulls bellow and cows moo, The watchdogs bark, the geese quack,

And doves and pigeons coo.

The peacock spreads his tail and squawks

Pigs squeal, and robins sing, And even serpents know enough To hiss before they sting

But man, the greatest masterpiece That nature could devise,

Will often stop and hesitate BEFORE HE'LL ADVERTISE

Mr. J. E. Cooley who spent two months with his mother and relatives in Inglewood, California, returned Friday morning.

Mr. C. W. Rideout, Chinook, Post Master left Friday for Sardis, B. C., where he joined his family.

Mr. Harry Trogan who spent the winter months in the U. S. A., returned this week.
